

Notes on Teaching Mixed Powder Analysis

One of the best methods I have run across to teach students how to analyze mixed powders is to make up samples of each of the possible mixed two powders. Then have the students practice on each of them.

If the team makes it on to the states or nationals, you will want to also make up the three powder mixtures for the team to practice with also.